OPPOSITION MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

Defendants Mousa Namvar, Magdiel, LLC, Namco 8, LLC, Wishlab 90, LLC, Bunhurst, LLC, DGADE of Delaware, LLC, Lacy 20, LLC, Hooshang Namvar, Homayoun Namvar, Ramin Namvar, Trifish, LLC, Tribun, LLC, Believers, LLC, Net, LLC, Light Source Management, LLC and Woodman Partners, LLC (collectively, “Defendants”) hereby oppose the Trustee’s Motion in Limine to Sever and Exclude Evidence Relating to Bankruptcy Claims Against Namco Capital Group, Inc. [Docket No. 283] (the “Motion” or “Motion in Limine”) filed by Plaintiff and Counterclaim defendant Bradley D. Sharp, the Chapter 11 trustee for Namco Capital Group, Inc. (“Plaintiff”) with this Court on September 23, 2013. For the reasons more fully set forth below, the Motion in Limine lacks merit and should be denied in all respects.

I. INTRODUCTION

Plaintiff’s Motion in Limine adds another layer of confusion and complexity to this case that rivals the confusion and complexity created by Plaintiff’s First Amended Complaint (“FAC”) which asserts over 15 causes of action against 33 defendants in over two hundred paragraphs of allegations. When read in isolation, the Motion holds itself as offering a way to streamline and simplify this case for trial, severing issues relating to Defendants’ proofs of claim (the “Claims”) filed in the Namco bankruptcy case. However, Plaintiff’s proposal is not equitable, will impair judicial economy and efficiency and severely prejudice Defendants. Furthermore, Plaintiff argues that this Court should withdraw its earlier withdrawal of reference to the bankruptcy court with respect to the matters relating to the Claims. Plaintiff argues that notwithstanding Bankruptcy Rules 3007(b) and 7001 et. seq., pursuant to which the Claims have become part of this lawsuit, the Claims should be tossed back to the bankruptcy court and adjudicated as a “contested matter,” rather than an adversary proceeding.

As a basis for the argument to sever, Plaintiff contends that inclusion of the Claims in this action will increase the length of trial, and confuse and overwhelm the jury. To straighten the record, however, Plaintiff is the one that made these Claims part of this case in the first place. See accompanying Request for Judicial Notice (“RJN”) ¶1 (FAC, Docket No. 1, page 38, claim for relief entitled “Objection to Claims” at ¶¶ 222-224). Once an objection to a claim is joined with relief sought in an adversary proceeding, it becomes part of the adversary proceeding. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3007(b); see, e.g., Matter of Chapman, 132 B.R. 132, 141, fn. 2 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1991); Pu v. Grubin (In re Food Mgmt. Grp.), 484 B.R. 574, 582 (S.D.N.Y. 2012). Indeed, claim objections litigated in adversary proceedings are not treated as a “contested matter.” See Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3007(b) and 9014.

Early on in the case, Defendants attempted to keep the Claims out of this action by filing a motion to dismiss. Exhibits A and B to RJN ¶¶2-3. However, Plaintiff insisted that it made sense to keep them in this action. Exhibit C to RJN ¶4. The motions to dismiss were denied. So not only will the proposed severance result in an inefficient, wasteful use of judicial resources, Plaintiff should also be judicially estopped from taking a position that is completely contrary to his previous position.

The Claims form the bases of Defendants’ counterclaims and/or affirmative defenses. As a result, they have been subject to discovery and litigated in this case. Severance would result in duplication of discovery and overlapping proof and trial presentation. Also, such severance will not enable the jury to review the overall history and course of the parties’ dealings and only provide partial information. Defendants’ counterclaims and/or affirmative defenses based on the Claims constitute a relevant, integral part of this litigation, and therefore, the matters relating to the Claims should not be severed.

Plaintiff’s argument that under 28 U.S.C. §157(b)(2)(B), the allowance and disallowance of proofs of claim against a bankruptcy estate must be administrated by the bankruptcy court is also misleading. The bankruptcy courts are “units” of the district courts that exercise the district court’s jurisdiction. This Court has “original and exclusive jurisdiction” to adjudicate this action, including the matters relating to the Claims. 28 U.S.C. §1334. This Court’s referral of this action to the bankruptcy

1 court was withdrawn when it was removed to this Court. It makes absolutely no 2 sense, especially after having litigated the Claims before this Court up and through 3 this point, to cancel the withdrawal of reference and put them back into the 4 bankruptcy court to create multiple, separate proceedings. This is especially true 5 given the District Court's original and exclusive jurisdiction.

6 Plaintiff argues that his "substantive objections to the Claims in the bankruptcy 7 case . . . may be rendered unnecessary by the outcome of this action." Motion, p. 3: 8 lines 2-6; p.11: lines 23-26. Plaintiff rather argues this as a tactic to strip Defendants 9 of their ability to assert their defenses. This is certainly not fair.

10 Lastly, Plaintiff's contention that "there is no legal basis for permitting 11 [Defendants] to refer to the [Claims] as established" is not true. A properly executed 12 and filed proof of claim is deemed to establish the validity and amount of the claim, 13 unless an objection with evidence of at least equal probative force is filed. Here, the 14 Claims were properly executed and filed, and no substantive objection has been filed 15 to the Claims. The validity and amount of the Claims are deemed established, and 16 Defendants should be able to so state. In re Holm, 931 F.2d 620, 623 (9th Cir.1991).

17 For these reasons, and those further set forth below, Plaintiff's Motion in 18 Limine should be denied in all respects.

19 II. ARGUMENT

20 A. Legal Standards.

21 1. Bankruptcy Court Jurisdiction

22 In Northern Pipeline Construction Co. v. Marathon Pipe Line Co., 458 U.S. 50
 23 (1982), the U.S. Supreme Court held that the Bankruptcy Act of 1978 impermissibly 24 shifted essential attributes of judicial power from the Article III district court to its 25 non-Article III adjunct, the bankruptcy court. Congress responded by enacting the 26 Bankruptcy Amendments and Federal Judgeship Act of 1984, which provided district 27 courts with original but not exclusive jurisdiction over all bankruptcy proceedings.
 28 See 28 U.S.C. § 1334(b) (1994). Moreover, to insulate the 1984 Amendments from a

1 constitutional assault like that in Marathon, Congress enacted 28 U.S.C. § 157. That 2 section classifies matters as either “core proceedings,” in which the bankruptcy court 3 “may enter appropriate orders and judgments,” or “non-core proceedings,” which the 4 bankruptcy court may hear but for which it may only submit proposed findings of fact 5 and conclusions of law to the district court for de novo review. 28 U.S.C. § 157 6 (1994). Actions that do not depend on bankruptcy laws for their existence and that 7 could proceed in another court are considered “non-core.” See In re Castlerock
8 Properties, 781 F.2d 159, 162 (9th Cir. 1986); Security Farms v. International Broth.
9 Of Teamsters, Chauffers, Warehousemen & Helpers, 124 F.3d 999, 1008 (9th Cir.
10 1997).

11 Section 157 also governs the district court’s authority to withdraw the reference 12 and, consistent with the Marathon decision, mandates withdrawal in cases requiring 13 material consideration of non-bankruptcy federal law. See 28 U.S.C. § 157(d). The 14 district court’s authority for permissive withdrawal is governed by the first sentence of 15 28 U.S.C. § 157(d): “The district court may withdraw ... any case or proceeding 16 referred [to the bankruptcy court] on its motion or on timely motion of a party, for 17 cause shown.” 28 U.S.C. § 157(d) (emphasis added).

18 The three subsections of 28 U.S.C. § 1334 that govern basic bankruptcy 19 jurisdiction provide:

20 (a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this 21 section, the district courts shall have original and exclusive 22 jurisdiction of all cases under title 11.

23 (b) Notwithstanding any Act of Congress that confers 24 exclusive jurisdiction on a court or courts other than the 25 district courts, the district courts shall have original but not 26 exclusive jurisdiction of all civil proceedings arising under 27 title 11, or arising in or related to cases under title 11.
28 [Emphasis added]

(c)–(d) [abstention provisions]

(e) The district court in which a case under title 11 is commenced or is pending shall have exclusive jurisdiction of all of the property, wherever located, of the debtor as of the commencement of such case, and of the property of the estate.

28 U.S.C. § 1334.

The bankruptcy courts are “units” of the district courts that exercise the district court’s jurisdiction under terms specified by Congress. 28 U.S.C. § 157. Through General Order No. 266, effective July 23, 1984, the United States District Court for the Central District of California exercises the authority conferred by 28 U.S.C. § 157(a) to refer to the District’s bankruptcy judges all matters under the Bankruptcy Code and all proceedings arising under the Bankruptcy Code or arising in or related to a case under the Bankruptcy Code.

Congress placed statutory limitations on bankruptcy court jurisdiction by distinguishing between “core” and “noncore” proceedings. Absent consent of the parties, bankruptcy judges can only hear but not finally determine those matters deemed “non-core” under 28 U.S.C. § 157. “Core” proceedings generally involve causes of action created or determined by the Bankruptcy Code or administrative matters arising only in bankruptcy cases. In re Harris Pine Mills, 44 F.3d 1431, 1435–36 (9th Cir. 1995). Also, title 28 of the United States Code contains a nonexclusive list of 16 specific core proceedings. 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2).

2. Establishing Proof of Claim Against Bankruptcy Estate

In order to recover against a bankruptcy estate, creditors typically must file proofs of claims. See Pioneer Inv. Servs. Co. v. Brunswick Assoc. Ltd. P’ship, 507 U.S. 380, 383, (1993). A properly prepared and filed proof of claim, under section 501 of the Bankruptcy Code, is prima facie evidence of the validity and amount of the claim and is deemed allowed unless a party in interest objects. 11 U.S.C. § 502(a); Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3001(f).

1 “[T]he allegations of the proof of claim are taken as true. If those allegations 2 set forth all the necessary facts to establish a claim and are not self-contradictory, they 3 prima facie establish a claim. Should objection be taken, the objector is then called 4 upon to produce evidence and show facts tending to defeat the claim by probative 5 force equal to that of the allegations of the proofs of claim themselves.” In re Holm, 6 931 F.2d 620, 623 (9th Cir.1991). In other words, properly executed and filed proofs
7 of claim have an “independent evidentiary effect.” In re Leverett, 378 B.R. 793, 799 8 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 2007).

9 A party objecting to a proof of claim has the initial burden of presenting factual 10 evidence tending to defeat the prima facie validity of a proof of claim without the 11 burden of ultimate persuasion. In re Distrigas Corp., 75 B.R. 770, 772-73 (Bankr. D.
12 Mass. 1987) (internal citations omitted). If a claimant cannot produce sufficient 13 evidence to prove his own claim, it becomes subject to disallowance. In re Greene, 71 14 B.R. 104, 106 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1987).

15 B. Pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 3007, Claim Objections Joined in 16 Adversary Proceeding Become Part of the Adversary Proceeding.

17 In this case the Plaintiff asserted as a cause of action: “Objection to Claims.” 18 See RJN ¶1 (the FAC at paragraphs 222-224 ).<sup>1</sup> Moreover, the FAC also asserts as the 19 Sixteenth Claim for Relief, a cause of action for Subordination, wherein Plaintiff 20 alleges “. . . Certain of the Namvar Defendants... have asserted or may assert claims 21 against Namco, seeking an affirmative recovery or for purposes of establishing a right 22 of offset.... Subordination of any claims of the Namvar Defendants... to all other 23 claims would not be inconsistent with the Bankruptcy Code.” Id. at paragraphs 217-24 221.

25 Plaintiff argues that Defendants’ counterclaims and/or affirmative defenses 26 based on their Claims should be severed from this action and separately tried in the 27 bankruptcy court. However, Plaintiff fails to mention that under Rule 3007 of the 28 <sup>1</sup> It is remarkable that the FAC identifies “Objection to Claims” in its caption.

1 Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure (“Fed. R. Bankr. P.” or “Bankruptcy Rule”), 2 when an objection to a claim is joined with relief sought in an adversary proceeding, it 3 becomes part of the adversary proceeding, Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3007(b); see, e.g., Matter
4 of Chapman, 132 B.R. 132, 141, fn. 2 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1991), and in the present case, 5 Plaintiff caused the Claims to become part of this lawsuit by joining his “Objection to 6 Claims” and the Sixteenth Claim for Relief for “Subordination” in the FAC.

7 A well-established body of case law supports the proposition that once an 8 objection to a claim is included in an adversary proceeding, the claim objection 9 becomes part of the adversary proceeding and belongs in the adversary. See, e.g., Pu
10 v. Grubin (In re Food Mgmt. Grp.), 484 B.R. 574, 582 (S.D.N.Y. 2012)(“Appellant 11 filed a proof of claim... [and] [i]n her capacity as trustee, Appellee filed a separate 12 adversary proceeding against Appellant to recover what she believed to be fraudulent 13 transfers and/or impermissible preferences. She later filed objections to Appellant’s 14 proof of claim in the bankruptcy case... The bankruptcy court consolidated 15 Appellee’s attacks on Appellant’s claim into a single adversary proceeding.”...
16 “Appellant also appears to be correct in asserting that, under the Federal Rules of 17 Bankruptcy Procedure, Appellee improperly filed a direct attack against Appellant’s 18 asserted security interest in the form of claim objections in the bankruptcy case, rather 19 than in an adversarial proceeding.”); In re Mathiason, 16 F.3d 234, 238 (8th Cir.1994) 20 (“if an objection is joined with a demand for relief of the kind specified in Rule 7001, 21 the litigation becomes an adversary proceeding under Rule 3007. The Debtor need 22 not commence a separate adversary proceeding”); In re Magic Circle Energy Corp., 23 64 B.R. 269, 271 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 1986)(“Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3007, dealing with 24 objections to claims, is clear that should an objection to a claim be joined with a 25 demand for relief of the kind specified in Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7001, it becomes an 26 adversary proceeding.”).

27 Here, since becoming part of this adversary proceeding by Plaintiff’s inclusion 28 of his Objection to Claims and Subordination in the operative complaint pursuant to 1 Bankruptcy Rule 3007(b) (and subsequently also Defendants' affirmative defenses of 2 offset, recoupment, and/or counterclaims), the Claims have been addressed in this 3 litigation. They should rightfully remain in the within action.

4 C. Claim Objections Litigated in Adversary Proceeding Are Not 5 Treated as a "Contested Matter" Under Bankruptcy Rule 9014.

6 An adversary proceeding involves its own processes similar to civil litigation.
7 See Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7001, et seq. Here, because Plaintiff's Objections to Claims 8 have become part of, and are addressed in this action (adversary proceeding), which 9 adversary proceeding has been removed to this Court, Plaintiff's contentions that the 10 Claims should be sent back to the bankruptcy court (essentially cancelling this Court's 11 withdrawal of reference to the bankruptcy court that removed the Claims to this Court 12 in the first place), and that they should be adjudicated in the bankruptcy court as a 13 contested matter under Bankruptcy Rule 9014, wholly lack merit. See Fed. R. Bankr.
14 P. 3007(b) and 9014; Motion, p. 13: lines 23-25.

15 Plaintiff argues that proofs of claim are subject to "core" jurisdiction of the 16 bankruptcy court and must be administered by the bankruptcy court. Motion, p.13:
17 lines 24-25; p. 14: lines 11-12. Plaintiff argues as if this Court does not have as much 18 jurisdiction as the bankruptcy court over the matters relating to the Claims. However, 19 it is this Court, an Article-III court that has "original and exclusive jurisdiction" over 20 them. See 28 U.S.C. §1334(a), (b). The bankruptcy court has authority to adjudicate 21 them because the District Court refers such proceedings to the bankruptcy court. 28 22 U.S.C. § 157. By having this adversary proceeding removed to this Court, this Court 23 withdrew the reference to the bankruptcy court.

24 First, there is no reason why this Court's reference to the bankruptcy court, 25 which has been withdrawn, should be restored respect to the Claims, only to create 26 new, multiple, separate proceedings in the bankruptcy court, while the adversary 27 proceeding is litigated in this Court. This does not promote judicial economy, and 28 causes only inconvenience and prejudice. Moreover, if the Claims involving common

1 law causes of action are deemed non-core,<sup>2</sup> the bankruptcy court will not enter final 2 judgments and the parties may have to come back to this Court, subject to this Court's 3 de novo review. Second, the Claims were joined in this action pursuant to Bankruptcy 4 Rule 3007(b) and have become part of an adversary proceeding. There is no reason 5 why the Claims should be adjudicated as a contested matter, and not as an adversary 6 proceeding. Third, if the Claims are adjudicated as an adversary proceeding, there is 7 no reason why such an adversary proceeding cannot proceed before this Court and 8 must proceed in the bankruptcy court.

9 D. Severing Defendants' Claims Will Impair Judicial Economy and 10 Efficiency, and Fairness, and Extremely Prejudice Defendants.

11 Civil Rule 42(b) provides that a trial court may order a separate trial of one or 12 more separate issues, claims "when separate trials will be conducive to expedition and 13 economy." Wausau Business Ins. Co. v. Turner Cost. Co., 204 F.R.D. 248 (S.D.N.Y.
14 2001) (internal citation omitted). Here, separate trials will not be conducive to 15 expedition and economy.

16 As set forth above, Defendants' counterclaims and/or affirmative defenses to 17 Plaintiff's allegations are based, in part, on their Claims. Therefore, it does not make 18 sense to separately litigate the Claims in another court. This is an inefficient, wasteful 19 use of judicial resources, and also may lead to inconsistent results. Also, because the 20 Claims constitute counterclaims and/or defenses, they absolutely have been litigated 21 in this case and subject to discovery. Defendants have been subject to discovery and 22 certain of them have been deposed specifically on the Claims they filed against the 23 Namco bankruptcy estate.

24 This lawsuit involves the same parties, the same lawyers, claims concerning the 25 same accountings and much of the same evidence encompassing the same time

26
27 <sup>2</sup> Defendants do not necessary argue that the relevant litigation would constitute a 28 non-core proceeding, but are pointing out that there is uncertainty under Stern v. Marshall, 131 S. Ct. 2594 (2011), which generated challenges to the bankruptcy court's "core" jurisdiction.

1 frames. Plaintiff's proposed severance would therefore increase the cost and burden 2 on the parties and the courts and inconvenience and prejudice Defendants by forcing 3 them to engage in multiple separate actions rather than just one.

4 Rather than putting forth any admissible evidence to show why severance is 5 warranted, Plaintiff instead speculates that multiple counterclaims and defenses 6 asserted by multiple Defendants will confuse and overwhelm the jurors at trial.
7 However, the jury will need to review the full context of the parties' transactions and 8 course of the dealings in order to assess the claims for accounting and other highly 9 related allegations. The jury will not be able to do this without complete information.

10 Plaintiff also argues that because the Claims are "factually intensive, complex 11 claims... that would take significant time to try," the Claims should be severed from 12 the action. Motion, p. 5: 4-8. Plaintiff is making it appear as though Defendants are 13 the ones complicating this case. However, apart from the fact that the Claims need to 14 be tried in this case because they address the offsets/recoupments which constitute 15 important, integral defenses for Defendants, it was Plaintiff, who alleged over 15 16 causes of action against 33 defendants, and caused the litigation to be "factually 17 intensive and complex." It is not fair and equitable to allow Plaintiff to plead umpteen 18 causes of action against umpteen defendants, and then argue that Defendants' 19 counterclaims and defenses should be severed from the lawsuit because litigating 20 them would prolong the trial.

21 E. The Claims, Forming the Bases of Defendants' Counterclaims and 22 Affirmative Defenses, Are Necessary and Indispensable to the Trial; 23 Therefore, They Should Not be Severed.

24 Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, "the impulse is toward entertaining 25 the broadest possible scope of action consistent with fairness to the parties; joinder of 26 claims, parties and remedies is strongly encouraged." United Mine Workers of Am. v.
27 Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 724 (1966). As a result, Rule 13(b) of the Federal Rule of Civil 28 Procedure ("Fed. R. Civ. P." or "Civil Rule") provides that "[a] pleading may state as 1 a counterclaim against an opposing party any claim that is not compulsory.” Fed. R.

2 Civ. P. 13(b). The purpose of this is “to promote trial convenience and expedite the 3 final determination of disputes, thereby preventing multiple lawsuits.” DirecTV, Inc.
4 v. Barrett, 220 F.R.D. 630, 631 (D. Kan. 2004) (quoting 7 Charles Alan Wright, 5 Arthur R. Miller & Mary Kay Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1652 (3d ed.
6 2001). Asserting such permissive counterclaims promotes efficiency, allowing 7 multiple conflicts between parties to be resolved in a single lawsuit, rather than 8 burdening the court and the parties with the costs of separate lawsuits. Mosley v. Gen.
9 Motors Corp., 497 F.2d 1330, 1332 (8th Cir. 1974) (“Single cases generally tend to 10 lessen the delay, expense, and inconvenience to all concerned.”).

11 On the other hand, the Court has the discretion under Rule 21 to “sever any 12 claim against any party.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 21. However, Civil Rule 21 should be read 13 in conjunction with—and governed by substantially similar considerations as—Rule 14 42(b), “which authorizes the separate trial of any . . . counterclaim . . . ‘in furtherance 15 of convenience or to avoid prejudice, or when separate trials will be conducive to 16 expedition and economy . . . .’” Wright & Miller, 7 Fed. Prac. & Proc. Civ. § 1689 (3d 17 ed. 2012) (citing Fed. R. Civ. P. 42); see also, e.g., Jajdelski v. Kaplan, Inc., No. 2:05-18 CV-01054-KJD-(GWF), 2010 WL 2326069, at *5 (D. Nev. June 7, 2010) (noting 19 severance under Civil Rule 21 and bifurcation under Civil Rule 42(b) should be 20 governed by the same considerations of convenience, judicial economy, and 21 prejudice).

22 “[T]he general practice is to try all the issues in a case at one time; and it is only 23 in exceptional instances where there are special and persuasive reasons for departing 24 from this practice that distinct causes of action asserted in the same case may be made 25 the subjects of separate trials.” Miller v. Am. Bonding Co., 257 U.S. 304, 308 (1921).
26 As a result, “Courts have recognized a presumption in favor of the nonmoving party 27 that all claims in a case will be resolved in a single trial and not be severed, placing 28 the burden on the party moving for severance” to demonstrate that exceptional

1 circumstances exist to make severance necessary. Equal Rights Ctr. v. Equity
2 Residential, 483 F. Supp. 2d 482, 489 (D. Md. 2007). “It is the interest of efficient 3 judicial administration that is to be controlling under the rule, rather than the wishes of 4 the parties.” Wright & Miller, 7 Fed. Prac. & Proc. Civ. § 2388 (3d ed. 2012). “With 5 respect to both discovery and trial,” the movant bears the “burden of proving that the 6 bifurcation will promote judicial economy and avoid inconvenience or prejudice to the 7 parties.” Spectra-Physics Lasers, Inc. v. Uniphase Corp., 144 F.R.D. 99, 101 (N.D.
8 Cal. 1992).

9 Because Plaintiff’s proposed severance is, on its face, less efficient than trying 10 the claims and counterclaims/defenses in a single suit, Plaintiff attempts to convince 11 the Court that the Claims are independent of the case-in-chief. Motion, p.12: lines 10-12 22. But Plaintiff is wrong.

13 Offset and recoupment are often asserted as defenses to the trustee/debtor’s 14 attempt to avoid transfers. Recoupment is a common law doctrine that is not 15 expressly recognized in the Bankruptcy Code, but is preserved through judicial 16 decisions. 5 Collier on Bankruptcy ¶ 553.10 (15th ed. rev. 2001). The bankruptcy 17 trustee takes property subject to the rights of recoupment. Megafoods Stores, Inc. v.
18 Flagstaff Realty Assocs. (In re Flagstaff Realty Assocs.), 60 F.3d 1031, 1035 (3rd 19 Cir.1995). See also Reiter v. Cooper, 507 U.S. 258, 265 n. 2, (1993) (observing that 20 courts have allowed the use of recoupment in bankruptcy cases); Madigan v. Peterson 21 (In re Madigan), 270 B.R. 749, 753-34 (2001).

22 Recoupment involves “netting out debt,” Oregon v. Harmon (In re Harmon), 23 188 B.R. 421, 425 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1995), and is allowed “because it would be 24 inequitable not to allow the defendant to recoup those payments against the debtor’s 25 subsequent claim.” Newbery Corp. v. Fireman’s Fund Ins. Co., 95 F.3d 1392, 1401 26 (9th Cir. 1996) (quoting 4 Collier on Bankruptcy, ¶ 553.03, at 553–15 (15th 27 ed.1995)); Long Term Disability Plan of Hoffman–La Roche, Inc. v. Hiler (In re 28 Hiler), 99 B.R. 238, 243 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1989) (“[T]he application of recoupment goes

1 to the equity of the claim.”).

2 The common law claim for recoupment is analogous to a “compulsory 3 counterclaim interposed solely to defeat or diminish plaintiff’s recovery.” Madigan, 4 270 B.R. at 755 (internal citation omitted). “Recoupment permits a determination of 5 the just and proper liability on the main issue...”, Newbery, 95 F.3d 1400 (quoting 6 Reiter v. Cooper, 507 U.S. 258, 265 n. 2 (1993)), “based on the premise that the 7 defendant should be entitled to show that because of matters arising out of the 8 transaction sued on, he or she is not liable in full for the plaintiff’s claim.” Id. at 1401 9 (citations omitted).

10 “The right of setoff (also called ‘offset’) allows entities that owe each other 11 money to apply their mutual debts against each other, thereby avoiding ‘the absurdity 12 of making A pay B when B owes A.’ “ Citizens Bank of Maryland v. Strumpf, 516 13 U.S. 16 (1995)(internal citation omitted). Although the right of setoff is provided in 14 the Bankruptcy Code, section 553 “is not an independent source of law governing 15 setoff; it is generally understood as a legislative attempt to preserve the common-law 16 right of setoff arising out of non-bankruptcy law.” United States v. Arkison (In re 17 Cascade Roads, Inc.), 34 F.3d 756, 763 (9th Cir. 1994)(quoting United States v.
18 Norton, 717 F.2d 767, 772 (3d Cir.1983)).

19 Although Plaintiff focuses on the fact that certain Defendants did not 20 specifically plead offset and recoupment (and/or indemnification) as counterclaims.
21 Motion, p.2: line 2; p. 4: lines 23-24, Defendants were well entitled to plead 22 recoupment and offset as affirmative defenses. Whether the offset and/or recoupment 23 is viewed as an affirmative defense or a counterclaim,<sup>3</sup> any failure to explicitly refer to 24 recoupment or offset in/as counterclaims is not a sufficient reason for the court to 25 disregard that theory in trying the main case. In re Peterson, 437 B.R. 858, 871 (D.
26 Ariz. 2010)(internal citations omitted).

27 <sup>3</sup> California Cannery and Growers cites to 2A Moore’s Federal Practice ¶ 8.27[3] (2d 28 ed. 1985) for the usage of common law recoupment as both a compulsory counterclaim and an affirmative defense under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

1 Civil Rule 21, which Plaintiff cites in support of his argument for severance, 2 governs “misjoinder and nonjoinder of parties.” Many of the cases cited in Plaintiff’s 3 Motion in Limine involve requests to sever claims against multiple defendants based 4 on improper joinder. They involve other considerations bearing on judicial economy 5 that are absent here.

6 In Deskovic v. City of Peekskill, 673 F.Supp.2d 154, 171 (S.D.N.Y. 2009), for 7 example, a former inmate brought numerous different claims against numerous 8 defendants including the city, county, police officers, correction officers, and other 9 public officials, and one of the defendants (correction officer) moved to sever those 10 claims asserted against him. In Blesedell v. Mobile Oil, 708 F.Supp. 1408, 1422 11 (S.D.N.Y. 1998), three employees brought an employment discrimination suit against 12 the employer, and the court denied the severance of the trials of the three employees 13 because the right to relief sought arose involved common questions of law and fact 14 and proof could be introduced by all parties without the threat of confusion of issues 15 and overlapping relief. In Wausau Business Ins. Co. v Turner Const. Co, 204 F.R.D.
16 248 (S.D.N.Y. 2001), the plaintiff, a construction company, brought a third party 17 action against a contractor and a fourth party action against its insurer in connection 18 with the fire of a building. The contractor and insurer moved, and the court allowed 19 them, to sever the claims against them because the court believed that the contractor 20 and insurer would be significantly prejudiced by having to defend in the multiparty 21 action so soon after becoming parties, without having adequate time to conduct 22 discovery or prepare pretrial motions, but at the same time, the court did not want to 23 delay the trial involving the remaining parties only to give the contractor and insurer 24 more time to prepare.

25 F. Plaintiff Should be Judicially Estopped from Taking a Position
26 Clearly Inconsistent With and Contrary to His Previous Position.

27 Early on in this lawsuit, Defendants filed Rule 12(b)(6) motions to dismiss with 28 the bankruptcy court (the “Motions to Dismiss”) attached to RJN as Exhibits A and

1 B, arguing, among other things, that Plaintiff's "Objection to Claims," which 2 purported to be an objection to every claim filed by each of the 33 defendants sued in 3 this action, was improper and must be dismissed. Exhibit A to RJN at pp. 31-32; 4 Exhibit B to RJN at pp. 33-34. In opposition to the Motions to Dismiss, Plaintiff 5 stated that "the protest is ridiculous," (Exhibit C to RJN, p. 33: line 22) and 6 contended that it made sense to keep the claim objections in this action because they 7 involve the same parties and would not take any extra time or resources.

8 Specifically, Plaintiff stated that "inasmuch as the avoidance claims upon which 9 the claim objections are based are pending in the lawsuit and will presumably proceed 10 on the same timetable, and the objections are being asserted against the parties to this 11 proceeding, and the objection itself is derivative of the avoidance claims and so should 12 require no expenditure of additional resources by the parties or the Court, the Trustee 13 submits that it makes sense to allow them to remain grouped together in this 14 proceeding, and the Court has authority under Bankruptcy Rule 3007(c) to do so." 15 Exhibit C to RJN, pp.33-34: lines 27-28, lines 1-4. This part of the Motion to 16 Dismiss was ruled in Plaintiff's favor.

17 Plaintiff should be judicially estopped from now taking an inconsistent, if not 18 completely opposite and contrary, position. "Under the judicial estoppel doctrine, 19 where a party assumes a certain position in a legal proceeding, and succeeds in 20 maintaining that position, he may not thereafter, simply because his interests have 21 changed, assume a contrary position, especially if it be to the prejudice of the party 22 who has acquiesced in the position formerly taken by him." New Hampshire v.
23 Maine, 532 U.S. 742, 742-43(2001) (internal citation omitted).

24 Courts invoke and apply the doctrine of judicial estoppel to a circumstance in 25 which a party's later position, which was previously accepted by the court, is clearly 26 inconsistent with its earlier position, and would derive an unfair advantage or impose 27 an unfair detriment on the opposing party if not estopped. Id. This is precisely the 28 case here.

1 Furthermore, Plaintiff presently takes inconsistent positions in different 2 pleadings filed in this very same action. While arguing that Defendant's 3 counterclaims and affirmative defenses based on the Claims are independent of the 4 claims asserted by him, Plaintiff, in his opposition to Defendants' motion to exclude 5 evidence of the criminal indictment, conviction, and/or sentencing of Ezri Namvar 6 from introduction at trial (RJN ¶5), argues that Defendants' filed proofs of claim are 7 relevant to his aiding and abetting claims asserted in this action. RJN ¶5, p. 1-2: lines 8 24-27, 1-7. Plaintiff should be estopped and prohibited from deliberately changing his 9 positions according to the exigencies of the moment.

10 G. The Validity and Amount of Defendants' Claims Have Been 11 Established by Properly Executed and Filed Proofs of Claims Under 12 Rule 3001(f).

13 As stated above, a proof of claim executed and filed in accordance with the 14 applicable bankruptcy rules constitutes prima facie evidence of the validity and 15 amount of the claim. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3001(f).

16 Plaintiff argues that if Defendants posit that the Claims are established because 17 no objection has been filed, they are not established because he has filed an objection 18 under section 502(d) of the Bankruptcy Code. Motion, p.15: lines 10-11. However, 19 even if an objection to a claim is filed, "filing an objection without more is insufficient 20 to challenge the rebuttable presumption of validity of the claim." Matter of Chapman, 21 132 B.R. 132, 143 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1991). The claimant will prevail unless the 22 objecting party produces evidence at least equal in probative force to that offered by 23 the proof of claim and which, if believed, would refute at least one of the allegations 24 that is essential to the claim's legal sufficiency. E.g., Lundell v. Anchor Const.
25 Specialists, Inc. (In re Lundell), 223 F.3d 1035, 1041 (9th Cir. 2000); Sherman v.
26 Novak (In re Reilly), 245 B.R. 768, 773 (B.A.P. 2nd Cir. 2000).

27 As to whether Plaintiff's argument about whether section 502(d) of the 28 Bankruptcy Code applies, the Plaintiff's claims will be tried by this Court, and

1 ultimately a determination will be made whether the Plaintiff prevails on its 2 complaint, and to what extent the Defendants are entitled to assert their offset and 3 recoupment defenses.

4 Plaintiff further contends that Defendants should not be allowed to use the word 5 “established” in connection with their Claims because that word is “not commonly 6 used in the context of claim allowance, and. . . does not have an accepted meaning.” 7 Motion, p. 15: lines 5-7. However, courts routinely state that a properly executed and 8 filed proof of claim establishes a claim. See, e.g., Wright v. Holm (In re Holm), 931 9 F.2d 620, 623 (9th Cir. 1991) (“If those allegations set forth all the necessary facts to 10 establish a claim and are not self-contradictory, they prima facie establish a claim.”); 11 In re Schlehr, 290 B.R. 387 (Bankr. D. Mont. 2003)(“burden...to establish validity of 12 its claims”); In re Hughes, 313 B.R. 205, 208 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 2004)(“Initially, a 13 creditor bears the burden of establishing its claim.”); In re Fidelity Holding Co., Ltd., 14 837 F.2d 696, 698 (5th Cir.1988) (“a party correctly filing a proof of claim is deemed 15 to have established a prima facie case...”); (emphasis added to the word “establish”).

16 Here, Plaintiff does not dispute that the Claims were properly executed and 17 filed, and no objection accompanied by evidence of at least equal probative force has 18 been filed to the Claims. The validity and amount of the Claims, or the rebuttable 19 presumption of the validity and amount of the Claims, have been established, and 20 Defendants should be able to so state.

21 Plaintiff attempts to confuse the Court by using the phrase “final allowance.”
22 There is no interim or final allowance. Claims are either allowed or disallowed.

23 In short, simply because the connotation of the word “established” is not 24 favorable for Plaintiff’s case does not mean that the fact that the validity and amount 25 of the Claims have been established should be excluded from trial or that Defendants’ 26 use of the word “established” should be prohibited.

27 III. CONCLUSION

28 Based on the foregoing, Defendants respectfully requests that this Court enter

1 an order denying the Motion in its entirety, with prejudice, and granting such other 2 and further relief as may be just and proper.
